As Reading Recovery expanded across Canada it became necessary to create regional divisions. Under the umbrella of the Canadian Institute of Reading Recovery (CIRR), the country has been divided into the Atlantic, Central, Western, and Mountain Pacific divisions.

Trainers at the four divisions support the implementation of Reading Recovery in boards and districts across their region through the training and ongoing professional development of teachers and teacher leaders, teaching children, and working with administrators to strengthen the implementation. Divisions are responsible for collecting and analyzing data for their region and submitting it annually to the CIRR.

Supported by the CIRR Board of Directors, the Reading Recovery network in Canada operates on three levels — schools, districts, and divisions.

Atlantic Division

Located in Halifax, Nova Scotia, the Atlantic Division supports the implementation of Reading Recovery in the provinces of Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, and Prince Edward Island. A full-time English trainer oversees the training and support of teacher leaders while a second bilingual trainer is contracted to oversee the implementation of Reading Recovery for Francophone and French immersion children in Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island, Manitoba, and Ontario.

In addition to providing training and ongoing support to teacher leaders, trainers consult with administrators in order to strengthen implementations in boards in both official languages. Teacher leader certification can be applied toward a masters of education degree through Mount Saint Vincent University in Halifax.

Central Division

The Central Division located in Toronto, Ontario, supports the implementation of Reading Recovery in boards of education across the province of Ontario. Reading Recovery is implemented in 13 English boards of education in Ontario: Bruce Grey Catholic, Dufferin Peel Catholic, Durham Catholic, Hamilton-Wentworth Catholic, Niagara Catholic, Peel, Rainy River, Simcoe, Simcoe Muskoka Catholic, Thames Valley, Toronto, York Catholic, and York Region. Reading Recovery is also implemented in two Ontario French boards of education and overseen by the Canadian Institute of Reading Recovery Atlantic Division.

Teachers, employed by one of the 13 boards of education, take a year-long Reading Recovery certification course at a training site within the board of education. Teacher leader candidates undertake a year-long course of study at the Central Division's Yorkhill Training Centre in Thornhill, ON. Teacher leader certification can be applied toward a masters of education degree through Mount Saint Vincent University's campus in Toronto.

Western Division

The Western Division is located in Winnipeg, Manitoba, and works with the cooperation of Manitoba Education, Citizenship and Youth. Trainers provide training and support to Reading Recovery teacher leaders throughout Manitoba in the Winnipeg, River East Transcona, St. James-Assiniboia, Lord Selkirk, Mountain View, and Southwest Horizon training centres. Academic credits at the masters level for teacher leader training and teacher training are offered through Brandon University.

Reading Recovery is implemented in English throughout the region. Initial pilot projects offering Reading Recovery in French in French immersion schools has been initiated by two school divisions.

Mountain Pacific Division

The Mountain Pacific Division, located in Vancouver, British Columbia, was established in 2009. This division of CIRR is responsible for training and supporting the implementations of Reading Recovery in the provinces of Alberta, British Columbia, and the Yukon Territory. Districts that presently implement Reading Recovery include Burnaby, Cariboo-Chilcotin, Edmonton Public, Grande Yellowhead, Langley, Peace River North, Peace River South, Vancouver, Victoria, and the Yukon Territory.
